tion in the market? No, say builders. With prices holding for close to a couple of years now, where is the option to slash prices, they ask. Even with built-up, unsold stocks on hand, builders are not cutting prices; at best, they are offering flexible payment options.

Inventory estimates in Chennai and its suburbs range from 45,000 to 60,000 units. Typically, for a down payment of 10-20 per cent of the house cost, builders take on pre-EMI payments so that the buyer does not shell out money from his dent of the Chennai chapter of Confederation of Real Estate Developers Association of India, says it is a buyer's market for now. Yet, developers do not have much room to slash prices. "Whatever can be done has been done," he feels.

Guideline values are continuously increasing, and VAT and new elements of service tax are all adding to the cost, as does inflation at 4-5 per cent a year.

Ravi Appaswamy of Appaswamy Real Estates, a premium builder with projects in the heart of the city, says that only bakkam in the heart of the city, around ₹6,500-9,000 in Guindy, in the periphery; and ₹4,500-6,000 in Sholinganallur, further to the south.
